Why should this entry win a DGA Green Thumb Award?

Additional Entry Information

In order for an entry to be eligible for a DGA Green Thumb Award it must be available for sale to the public. What catalog and/or website is currently selling or will be selling this product direct to the public?

Only products that were introduced to the public after September 17, 2018 are eligible. Please list the date that this entry was or will be introduced to the gardening consumer:

Please note that the judges will not distinguish between organic and non-organic products. Organic is a type of growing method, and therefore is not considered a "new" product.

Product samples should not be sent with this entry form. Please check below if you would like to submit product samples directly to the DGA Green Thumb Awards judges:

_____ Yes, I would like to submit samples of this entry _____ No, I do not wish to submit samples

Do you have a specific trade industry outlet that you would like your winning entry to be sent to? If so, please provide the name of the publication/website/etc. and a contact for this.

Certification

I certify that the information contained in this entry form is accurate. I also understand that, if this entry is chosen as a winner, a company representative is expected to accept the DGA Green Thumb Award in person at the DGA's Winter Conference held in Charleston, South Carolina in January of 2019.
